Dear Colleagues,

The Journal of Current Hematology Oncology Research (JCHOR) is proud to announce the release of its second issue. This edition features four original articles, a review and a case report that showcase the journal's commitment to providing readers with up-to-date research on hematological and oncological topics. Unfortunately, an earthquake disaster occurred in our country that caused more than 50.000 casualties, and JCHOR was very impressed as it started its publication life in this process. Despite this tragedy, we are determined to carry out our mission by continuing publication of JCHOR and striving for it to be included among nationally and internationally recognized scientific indexes.

In order to make sure that each article meets rigorous standards, all submissions go through two rounds of peer review before being accepted into the journal. Our editorial team consists only of highly qualified individuals who have extensive experience working in their respective fields within hematology or oncology research areas. Furthermore, we strive not only to provide reliable information but also ensure ethical accuracy throughout all aspects of the production process from manuscript submission evaluation until final publication stage. We believe this approach will help us reach higher levels of quality assurance which ultimately benefit both authors and readers alike.

We owe immense gratitude to all authors, reviewers, editorial board members and journal support teams who have contributed so much throughout this process; without them none of this would be possible. As we look ahead into an uncertain future, let us remember those who were lost during these tumultuous times as well as strive for brighter days ahead together through science.

Best regards,

Serhat ÇELİK, MD., PhDc.
